The concept of parative librarianship is an old one before the development of library literature and formal training. Librarianship was based more on observation and imitation. Innovation was at a low ebb; however, novel practices in other libraries studied in comparison with their own were adopted when found useful. Thus, parative librarianship has been in use.

Introduction Parative and International Librarianship

April 24th, 2020 - The terms parative librarianship and international librarianship are interchangeably used globally for describing multinational or transnational cooperation in librarianship after the World War II. International library communities felt the importance of library and information services for building peace in the minds of men and women.
